African American Males in Crisis: From An Urban School Age Perspective

27th Annual Conference of the Kansas Alliance of Black School Educators

Current research suggests that as early as third grade African American males are academically under performing in the areas of science and math, they are the highest population of students to be placed in special education, disproportionately have the highest disciplinary actions taken against them and have the highest dropout rate. Such alarming statistics call for the attention, action and support of all educators, families and communities.

Conference Topics Include:

- Drug/Alcohol Abuse
- The Politics of Education
- Bridges From Poverty
- Black Males in Higher Education
- How Stress Affects Student Learning
- Lessening Bullying Through a Lens of Cultural Competence

Keynote Speakers:
Dr. Darron Smith and
Terrell Davis
